

Cypress Business Consulting

With today's technology landscape evolving so quickly, many organizations can use assistance determining how technology can best help them reach their business goals.

See how technology can help your business.

Technology solutions can support your core business functions, manage customer interactions, decrease costs and grow revenues. Cypress can help you realize and profit from these benefits using a strategic technology growth plan.

At Cypress, we architect the intersection between your business and the world of technology. We work with you to define your business processes, map them to applicable technologies, and manage technology implementation and development.

Developing Process Baselines:

Companies need to first assess where they are today before looking into the future. How do the various elements of your business fulfill core functions? Developing a Process Baseline provides a very clear and real assessment of which areas run smoothly vs. those in need of help. Our team's extensive experience and certification in Six Sigma and Lean Manufacturing makes us uniquely qualified to help.

Process Improvement Recommendations:

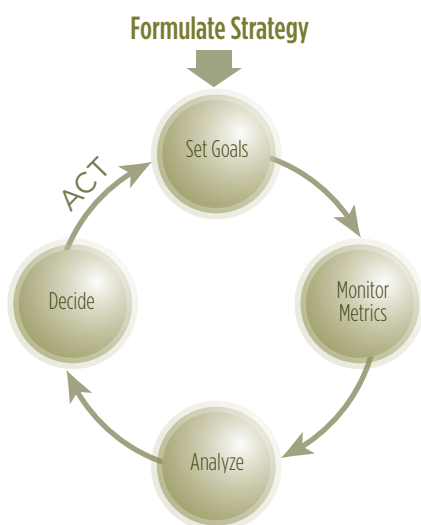

Our Process Baseline creates a clear vision of the current state of your organization, allowing thoughtful and measured recommendations to follow and process improvements that eliminate unnecessary expense and effort - and technologies to help implement the recommended streamlining.
